On 04/17/2026 police responded to 720 royal pkwy for a theft report. On scene, police met with the victim (Alyssa day) and the defendant (joseph Iskandar). Joseph is a maintenance worker at the hotel Alyssa is staying at. The victim stated she left her belongings in a secure room that the hotel provided. The hotel confirmed that the only people who have access to this secure room are management, housekeeping, and maintenance. Police reviewed security footage and witnessed the defendant go into the room at 1707 and come out of the room approximately 10 minutes later appearing to be concealing something from view of the security cameras. The defendant was the only person to enter the room after the victim secured her belongings. Police met the defendant in room 302 where he lives. The defendant allowed police into his room. The defendant stated he believed the items were abandoned property, which is why he took them. The defendant took the police downstairs to where he said the items might be and they were not found. The defendant then took police back up to his room where the iPad and laptop were located but the victim's wallet was still missing. While police were on scene, they saw drug paraphernalia in plain view and searched the room. Police found several crack pipes, drug paraphernalia, and cocaine. Due to the evidence on camera, as well as finding the belongings in the defendant's room as well as the drugs and paraphernalia, police had probable cause to swear out warrants.
